Corporate Sponsorship Proposal Cover Letter

Joseph Tarlin

College of Professional Studies, Northeastern University

LDR 6445 Corporate Sponsorships

Professor Michael Mominey

March 8, 2026

Dear Wells Fargo Representative,

I am writing to seek a title sponsor for the upcoming Men's Great Alaska Shootout tournament. I feel as if your company's mission and your ability to enhance a brand through corporate sponsorships would be ideal for optimizing this event's performance and fan experience. We understand that at Wells Fargo, the goal is to satisfy customer needs through fostering long-term interpersonal relationships. We believe that your customer centered approach is great for providing hospitality and developing a loyal fanbase over time. Being a reliable and well-known financial firm, Wells Fargo brings the reputation needed to build strong, trustworthy relationships between the fans and sponsors of this event. The best way to attract ticket buyers would be to create a sponsorship package with gold, silver, and bronze levels – each of these levels would have slightly different benefits, prices, and fan enhancements based on the type of package the individual purchased.

The gold package would include insider access before and after the event, discounted concessions (20%), top tier seating, and VIP benefits such as the ability to enter a high-end hospitality suite. For this package, I would keep the price around $75 - $100, to make it affordable for the younger demographic that may make up a large portion of the consumer base. More specifically, this package would allow for entry up to 3 hours before and after the game, an in-game suite with free food and beverages, and merchandise and concession discounts. It would be designed to attract the customers who are all-in and are very invested in the event – these fans would be able to take advantage of the value of the gold package and feel as if they are experiencing the entire event as an insider of the organization.

For those who are not as heavily invested but still want to take advantage of our deals, we could offer the silver pass, which would be more focused on concession discounts (10%) and optimal seating. This would be for the fans that want to have a great experience at the Great Alaska Shootout but may not feel like attending all of the insider events or devoting an entire day towards physically being there. This pass would also give the owners the ability to go to lower-tier hospitality suites for the first half of the game. Many of these fans may want to buy this pass rather than a normal ticket because it creates a much more enjoyable and enhanced experience for around double the price of what a normal ticket costs.

The Bronze deal would end up being about $30 and these fans would be paying a slightly higher cost than the price of a normal ticket. This deal would release before normal tickets and therefore give these fans the opportunity to purchase a better seat view before it is made available to the public. It would also feature 10% off all concessions. Fans would be paying the extra money to enjoy a potential better view and to save money on food and beverage. It is inevitable that fans go to a game to watch the teams compete and also buy concessions during these events, whether it is a bottle of water or a full course meal.

We will also be designating a social media team that creates advertisements and newsletters in order to spread information to the public about this event occurring. We would look into hiring a dance team and creating different forms of live entertainment during halftime. I am specifically interested in hiring a dunking crew to perform tricks on trampolines to enhance the fan experience when the game is not being played. We do really hope you consider being a title sponsor for our upcoming Great Alaska Shootout. Please do not hesitate to reach out with any questions - we look forward to hearing from you.

References

Prior, R. (2026). Developing Successful Sport Sponsorship Proposals. Northeastern University Online. https://northeastern.instructure.com/courses/236549/pages/week-9-developing-successful-sport-sponsorship-proposals-lecture-material?module_item_id=13225441

Wells Fargo (2026). Corporate Information Who We Are. Wells Fargo Website. https://www.wellsfargo.com/about/corporate/